

THE OREGON SUNDAY JOURNAL, PORTLAND, SUNDAY MORNING, JANUARY 14, 1912.

THE PEACH OF THE LITTLE BIG HORN

E. H. Pickard of Portland, Former Trooper of Seventh Cavalry, U. S. A., Tells How He Happened to Escape Death in Famous Indian Battle

Written Exclusively For The Sunday Journal

PORTLAND can lay claim to having been the scene of the only surviving member of the last meeting of the troops of the famous Seventh Cavalry. Five troops of the gallant Seventh Cavalry were killed in the battle of the Little Big Horn on June 25, 1876.

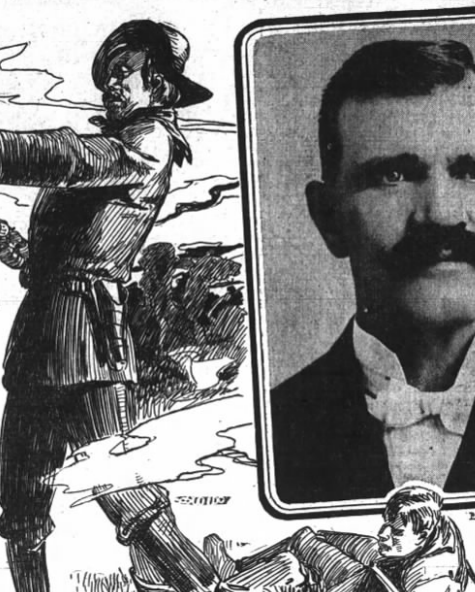

It was on the 21st of June, 1876, that the troops were thirty or forty Indians riding in a circle on the plain. They were merely making a show of bravado to the troops of the Seventh Cavalry. The Indian riders were facing back toward the woods.

"I remember no one firing a shot. The Indians who had not wanted to see the defense of the fallen commander. One or two men were killed. The survivors of the Custer charge into the village of Sitting Bull. History has given little credit. History has given little credit. History has given little credit.

"Part of the troops got into the woods. They were scattered and scattered through the creek to the bluffs where they were. They were scattered and scattered through the creek to the bluffs where they were.

WHAT FATHER HAS TO PAY FOR (Continued from the First Page of this Section.)

It was really a pity that the old gentleman wasn't allowed to tell all he knew because he could have told some of the nation's fathers. In the aggregate, for little things. For when father is in the office, he is in the office. For when father is in the office, he is in the office.

L. H. PICKARD PORTLAND

PICKARD AS CAVALRYMAN

An Autograph Edition

Autograph of E. H. Pickard

A PEACH OF A STORY (CONTINUED FROM PRECEDING PAGE.)

stood still. The code, in Jimmy's writing, was my hand about as that I had to lay the paper down—'On long; Chair looks O. K. First man sent for.' It was a relief to send the bulletin; it lay on my bulletin all that was lacking—

"The code, in Jimmy's writing, was my hand about as that I had to lay the paper down—'On long; Chair looks O. K. First man sent for.' It was a relief to send the bulletin; it lay on my bulletin all that was lacking—

L. H. PICKARD PORTLAND

PICKARD AS CAVALRYMAN

An Autograph Edition

Autograph of E. H. Pickard

A PEACH OF A STORY (CONTINUED FROM PRECEDING PAGE.)

stood still. The code, in Jimmy's writing, was my hand about as that I had to lay the paper down—'On long; Chair looks O. K. First man sent for.' It was a relief to send the bulletin; it lay on my bulletin all that was lacking—

"The code, in Jimmy's writing, was my hand about as that I had to lay the paper down—'On long; Chair looks O. K. First man sent for.' It was a relief to send the bulletin; it lay on my bulletin all that was lacking—